James Hastie, Head of Department, Russian Art, comments, “The sale is a testament to how robust the Russian art market is, and we are especially pleased with the auction record set for Svetoslav Roerich’s portrait of his father, Nicholas Roerich, which achieved $2.99 million, and was the highest price achieved for a Russian work of art sold at auction this week.”

Mark Moehrke, Senior Specialist, Russian Works of Art, adds, “We are delighted with the strong results of the works of art session of the sale. The market responded well to rare works of art and Fabergé at attractive estimates and we witnessed very competitive bidding from a diverse international client base.”
