Keith Penton, Head of London Jewellery Department, commented: "The London sale of 'Important Jewels' showed that quality, rarity and provenance continue to be the key factors sought by collectors worldwide. This was demonstrated by two important late 19th century sapphire brooches, one of Kashmir origin which realised £1,398,500, the other of Burmese origin which fetched £1,034,500, and a Fancy Deep Blue and Fancy Intense Pink diamond ring, all of which far exceeded their pre-sale estimates. Three private collections, which included signed jewels by Cartier, Graff, Jahan and 'mystery-set' jewels by Van Cleef & Arpels, saw fierce competition amongst international buyers. We look forward to the sale of Magnificent Jewels at Christie's New York on Wednesday, 10th December."
